Course Description

3725. Fundamentals of Management. Position yourself for management and leadership opportunities in your career. This course builds the foundation for developing the knowledge, skills, and mindset needed to succeed as a manager. Students learn how managers plan, organize, lead, and control to help organizations achieve their goals, while examining how organizational structure, culture, and decision-making shape effectiveness. Emphasis is placed on strengthening problem-solving, professional behavior, collaboration, and self-awareness, essential capabilities for contributing on teams today and growing into leadership roles tomorrow. Sophomore standing required. Prereq.: BUS 1500 (C) or BUS 1500H (C) and 2.5 GPA. 3 s.h.

Course Readings

Group	Title	Author	ISBN
Required

The course readings were selected to provide practical, workplace-relevant perspectives on management and professional development. Many are written for practitioner audiences so you can connect course concepts to real managerial decisions and build knowledge and skills you can use in internships, early-career roles, and future leadership opportunities.

All required readings are available online at no cost. For your convenience, links to each reading are provided within the corresponding module in Blackboard; you do not need to access them through the syllabus.
