Major Level Applied Percussion Course Components

2.1: Private Lessons and Percussion Seminar (class). Only the Percussion Seminar (Fridays 12:00-12:50pm) appears on your Banner schedule; private lessons are scheduled by the faculty.

2.2: Private Lessons are designed to address individual needs. The Percussion Coordinator bases private lesson assignment times upon an effective schedule for his students and will accommodate student time requests whenever possible, but students must understand that it is a luxury if faculty can accommodate a student's personal schedule, but not a responsibility, as faculty must assume student availability within the normal weekly university class schedule framework of M-F, 8AM-5PM.

- Lesson quantity: fifteen 50-minute lessons per semester and a weekly 50-minute Seminar class.
- Scheduling: The Percussion Coordinator assigns each student a private teacher and time, but these may change. Assignments are made in consideration of your past achievement, student/faculty schedules, and what we believe is best for you. The private lesson assignment schedule is posted via email the first week of each semester or anytime changes occur thereafter.
- Beginning and ending lessons: Notify your teacher of your presence by loudly knocking on my office door at your lesson time; using the rumba clave rhythm at the tempo from NG La Banda recording – "El Tragico". It is your responsibility to notify your teacher when you must leave.
- Preparation: Daily practice is expected. Plan to warm-up for 30-minutes before lessons.

2.3: Percussion Seminar Class is a weekly studio forum (Friday 12-12:50p.m.), attendance is required. Minors may elect to attend or may be encouraged to attend by faculty.

- Curriculum typically includes lectures, discussions, faculty, student, and guest artist performances, master classes and clinics, instrument care, tuning, maintenance, research projects, and studio logistics.

- Student (major level) performances in Seminar are required at least twice each semester and occur in a masterclass format, i.e., you perform and receive critical feedback from faculty and student colleagues. Repertoire may be derived from private lessons or Dana ensembles. Masterclass protocol includes dress appropriately, bring two copies of your music - one for the instructor and one for your colleagues, number measures at the beginning of each system in pencil, video record your performance and the studio's feedback, and take notes afterwards. Review your recording and notes prior to your next private lesson.
- Students develop pedagogical skills by assessing and coaching their colleagues via written or aural assessments of studio colleagues' performances.

2.4: Other course components:

- Attendance is required for guest artist clinics, masterclasses, student and faculty recitals and concerts, and Percussion Ensemble concerts; published on YSU percussion website "Events" tab.
- Rehearsal observation. Faculty may dedicate part of your private lessons to observing your ensemble rehearsals to diagnose your private lesson needs.
- Lesson observation. Faculty may assign you private lesson observations within the percussion or other DSM studios.
- Percussion logistics – studio instrument and facilities maintenance duties – are a necessary part of being a percussion major, are assigned by the faculty, and should be equitably shared amongst studio members.
- Required advisement meetings.
  - Final exam week advisement meeting with Percussion Coordinator - self and instructor assessment, review jury committee comments, plan future studies and registration.
  - Recital advisement meeting with the Percussion Coordinator, schedule one semester in advance of the required degree recital course.
  - Additional advisement meetings may occur for assistance with private lesson assignments, ensemble parts, course registration, orientation, recital preparation, graduate school selection and audition preparation, career guidance, etc.

Curriculum Level Descriptions
